

Nancy Kenney
Employee & Organizational Development Consultant
Golden Egg Communications
Improving Your Production & Success Capability

Nancy Kenney has 17 years of experience in performance consulting, facilitation, adult learning, motivational speaking, and performance measurement. She has managed corporate and university learning and development organizations and has successful experience leading and facilitating workforce consortiums. Nancy has studied under several key leaders in the training and development field. Don Kirkpatrick, the founder of the four-tier evaluation model, Peter Senge, author of The Fifth Discipline and Dana Gaines Robinson, author of Training for Impact.

Nancy's focus is on training, organizational assessments and performance enhancement, integrating both training and systems improvement strategies with her clients. Nancy works with a wide range of organizations in areas of consulting, leadership, customer service and communications. Nancy works specifically on linking training interventions with an organizational return on investment. She has succeeded with various customers saving them time and many thousands of dollars. She lives in Neosho, MO with her husband and two children.
